Indianapolis does not boast of a cooking school, such as many cities have, which does not prove, however, that there are no good cooks here. A great many ladies are thoroughly competent to go into their own, or even in some other one's kitchen, and prepare a meal good enough for any one to eat. In lieu of a cooking school a few young women have what they call h

There were numerous Hallowe'en parties last night, and at all of them there was an informality and merry-making quite unlike the enstomary programme of evening entertainments. The gatherings were small. Among those who invited friends were Miss Gertrade Barry of College avenue, Jessie Lovett and Ida Robbins. Morris Townley's friends gave him a surprise party, and at Captain Kercheval's home, at Irvington, there was a large party and elaborate preparations, a special electric car being chartered to convey the people from the city. found in the festival of authors, as their books and their characters have been chosen to be represented, and the visitor can interview at will Becky Sharpe or Lady Dudley, Little Nell or Mrs. Dombey. from the city.

Miss Mary Knippenberg entertained a few friends very pleasantly last evening in honor of Miss Margaret Reid Kackley and Mr. Von Hollub, of New York. About thirty friends enjoyed Miss Knippenberg's hospitality in her beautiful new home. The several apartments, with their exquisite furnishing, were embellished with flowers. The drawing-room in Louis XIV was brightened with tall yellow and white chrysanthemums, the library on the opposite side of the hall, with its darker colors and rich red flowers, making a pleasing contrast. The breakfast-room in green and white was used for the serving of lemonade, and ferns and feathery asparagus were combined with white roses and carnations. The dining-room was a picture in pink. On the center of the table was a large basket of maiden-hair ferns, and roses were scattered over the remainder of its surface. The favor for each guest was a musical instrument filled with sweet English violets. Mr. Von Hollub, a most accomplished musician, who is a pupil of the great Joseffy, delighted the friends with his plano-playing.
